

How can universities support their academic staff?

The swift move to online teaching revealed skills gaps of the teachers. More so than ever before Continuing Professional Development (CPD) for academic staff must remain a focus of universities since it will not only enable them to rise to the current challenge but also prepare them for the future. Join us in this session where we will explore guidance of online professional development of academic staff, tools and resources in the current climate to support them including time management and wellbeing.

Speakers:

- Prof. Helen Higson, Provost and Deputy Vice Chancellor (Education), Aston University
- Prof. Tracy Lightfoot, Associate Pro-Vice Chancellor Teaching, Learning and Students, University of York
- Prof. Richard John Last, Vice-Chancellor & CEO, Norwich University of the Arts (NUA)
- Prof. Maia Rogava, Head of the Centre for Academic Writing, Ilia State University, Georgia
- Moderator Simon Etherton, Future English Programme Director, British Council