Yerevan State University: Third Competition Announcement for scholars-in-residence at ASU

Program Title: American Studies

Introduction: Yerevan State University is pleased to announce the award from the U.S. Embassy in Yerevan for the development of an American Studies Program at YSU, Faculty of International Relations. A major goal of the project will be to develop within the newly established American Studies Center an accredited, internationally recognized master's degree program in American Studies.

To facilitate the development of the Master's degree in American Studies, Yerevan State University will be collaborating with Arizona State University in a faculty enrichment program in academic years 2020-2021 and 2021-2022 that will permit up to eight YSU faculty members to undertake a semester in residence at Arizona State University in the target field of American Studies. The objective of the semester-in-residence program will be to prepare, in collaboration with ASU colleagues, professional academic syllabi for new and revised courses for delivery in the proposed YSU M.A. degree in American Studies. YSU faculty members interested in participating in this new program are invited to apply for the semester-in-residence program at ASU using the attached application form. Although the American Studies Center will be housed in the YSU Department of International Relations, faculty members with academic interest in American Studies from other academic disciplines are welcome to apply.

What are the dates? Depending on the situation with the COVID the selected cohort of successful applicants will be in residence at Arizona State University for the four-month period, either from early January 2021 through early May 2021 or late August through end of December 2021.

What Will Successful Applicants Do While in Residence at ASU? YSU scholars-in-residence at ASU will attend a minimum of two courses/seminars in American Studies during the semester, will participate in other arranged seminars for YSU visiting scholars, and will prepare for delivery at least two course syllabi, which will be formally presented at an ASU seminar organized for that purpose at the close of the semester-in-residence. At least one of the courses developed must be taught in English Program Costs. Visiting scholars at ASU will receive a monthly stipend of approximately $1600. In addition, international airfare, and a book and materials allowance of $1000 will be provided. Funds are not available to cover costs for dependents of exchange participants.

Who is eligible to apply? All current Yerevan State University faculty members and aspirants (Ph.D. students) as well as all faculty members of accredited higher education institutions based in Yerevan, which currently have a social science program who have teaching and/or research interests related to American Studies, are encouraged to apply. Since the selected participants will attend seminars at ASU, English skills sufficient to participate in university classes and seminars will be required. In keeping with the ASU commitment to diversity and the university's policy to provide equal opportunity in educational programs and activities, discrimination is prohibited on the basis of race, color, religion, national origin, gender, sexual orientation, age, or disability.

Deadline: Completed applications and related attachments in English only should be emailed no later than October 23, 2020 to Prof. Alexander Markarov - amarkarov@ysu.am and Dr. Stephen Batalden (stephen.batalden@asu.edu), ASU Co-Project Director and Founding Director, ASU Melikian Center. Are there opportunities for those not able to spend a semester in residence at ASU? The new YSU American Studies Center will be organizing other research and guest lecture opportunities throughout the grant period. A YSU website announcing these opportunities will be opened shortly. We encourage you to consult that regularly.
