

Speakers:

- Moderator Kevin Van Cauter - Senior Adviser, Higher Education Partnerships, British Council
- Dr Liz Marr - Pro-Vice Chancellor (Students), The Open University
- David White - Head of Digital Learning, University of the Arts London
- Dr Jan Bamford - Professor of International Higher Education and Head of Student Experience and Academic Outcomes, London Metropolitan University
- Sena Çatal - Research Assistant, Member of Student Committee at Turkish Higher Education Quality Council

Synopsis:

As more and more universities move their teaching online, and with little indication when students may go back to the campus, effective engaging and interacting with current students is becoming a big challenge. How do we know if a student is truly participating in the online learning? How can we continue to motivate and inspire the future generation? Join us for an engaging session to hear from universities and learn their experience of connecting with their students, when face-to-face contact has reduced and, in some places, completely stopped.